

January 23, 2013

Contact: Laura Johnson
Phone 202.393.0020 ext. 117
ljohnson@nctq.org

TENNESSEE EARNS “B-” FOR STATE TEACHER PREPARATION POLICIES

New report from the National Council on Teacher Quality gives Tennessee one of highest grades in nation for teacher preparation policies; report provides roadmap for ensuring that all new teachers are classroom-ready.

January 23, 2013 (Washington, DC) — The National Council on Teacher Quality today released its sixth annual State Teacher Policy Yearbook, with a special focus on the state laws, rules and regulations that shape teacher preparation. This 2012 edition of the Yearbook provides Tennessee with a tailored analysis, Improving Teacher Preparation in Tennessee, which identifies the teacher preparation policy areas most in need of critical attention, as well as "low-hanging fruit," policies that can be addressed by Tennessee in relatively short order.

Tennessee is one of just four states in the nation to earn a “B-” in 2012. Tennessee also received a “B-” in 2011. The average grade across all 50 states and the District of Columbia is a “D+”.

NCTQ President Kate Walsh said, "With so much attention on the issue of teacher effectiveness, the relative lack of attention to how candidates for teaching are prepared for the job in the first place is puzzling. The Yearbook provides a roadmap for policymakers on how to get teacher effectiveness right from the start – by setting higher expectations for what teachers need to know and are able to do before they are licensed to become teachers. Our teachers deserve the very best preparation so that they can step into the classroom and help our students prepare to be the most successful in the world."

Tennessee is one of just three states (along with Minnesota and Indiana) that requires all secondary teachers to pass a content test in every subject area for which they are licensed to teach and one of three states that has strong requirements for student teaching (along with Indiana and Florida).

However, other aspects of Tennessee's teacher preparation policies are in need of critical attention, including:

- Raising admission requirements to ensure that teacher preparation programs admit candidates with strong academic records.
- Ensuring that elementary teachers know their subject matter and are ready to teach to the Common Core State Standards.
- Assessing middle school teachers in every core area they are licensed to teach.
- Eliminating generic K-12 special education licenses that lower the bar for special education teachers and make it virtually impossible for the state to ensure that these teachers know their subject matter and are prepared to teach grade-level content.

- Setting minimum performance standards for teacher preparation programs and holding them accountable for the performance of their graduates.

The report also offers Tennessee recommendations for improving its Transitional License alternate route into the teaching profession.

This year's Yearbook comes in advance of NCTQ's forthcoming (Spring 2013) Teacher Prep Review of the higher education-based teacher preparation programs in the nation. A key area of focus in both reports is admission standards, and the 2012 Yearbook includes a sneak peek of data from the Review, which finds that 88 percent of undergraduate teacher preparation programs in Tennessee are insufficiently selective, failing to ensure that candidates come from the top half of the college-going population.

Walsh continued: "The 2012 Yearbook will serve as an important companion to NCTQ's forthcoming Teacher Prep Review, which will identify programs that are doing the best job of preparing tomorrow's educators, those that need to improve and those that need restructuring. The Yearbook's recommendations can help state policymakers build a strong policy framework for effective teacher preparation so that our teachers get what they deserve: training that provides them with the tools they need to lead a classroom the day they graduate."

Improving Teacher Preparation in Tennessee, which includes national data and state-by-state comparisons of teacher preparation policies, is immediately available for free download at: www.nctq.org/stpy. For questions about the report, please contact Laura Johnson, Director of Communications at (202) 393-0020 ext. 117 or ljohnson@nctq.org.

Funding

The State Teacher Policy Yearbook was funded by private foundations across the United States, including the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, Carnegie Corporation of New York, The Joyce Foundation and The Walton Family Foundation. NCTQ accepts no funding from the federal government.

About NCTQ

The National Council of Teacher Quality —comprised of reform-minded Democrats, Republicans, and Independents— is a non-partisan research and policy group committed to restructuring the teaching profession based on the belief that all children deserve effective teachers. More information about NCTQ, including a list of the Board of Directors and Advisory Board, can be found on the NCTQ website, www.nctq.org.